The law of unintended consequences

Steve Kahane, ATA-R ATA President

Effective September 1, 2023, a new law in Texas requires all licensing agencies not to disclose the addresses, phone numbers or emails of the licensees. The law applies to all types of license holders in the state, not just appraisers. For us appraisers, it means that our contact information is no longer in our profile on the TALCB website or the national appraiser registry on the ASC website. It's easy to see why a law like this was enacted. It's not hard to imagine an angry customer confronting or harassing a licensee via email, phone or even at their home. So, while it's great that angry borrowers, sellers or agents can't look up our address on the TALCB website and leave a flaming bag of poop on our doorstep, it also means clients will have a hard time finding us.

I recently received a call from an AMC trying to find an appraiser in a specific locale. They hadn't heard of the new law and wondered why they could no longer find Texas appraisers searching by city, county or zip code in the Appraisal Subcommittee registry. Since then, I talked to some of my clients and most of them have used either the ASC registry or the TALCB site to search for appraisers. Now that this information is no longer public, how are appraisal users supposed to find appraisers in their area? Business has slowed down for most (if not all of us) so it's more important now than ever that we're able to connect with new clients.

ATA's new website has an improved search engine, making it easier for appraisal consumers to find qualified appraisers near them. Members will have to opt out if you don't want to share your contact information. It is up to you. If you wish to keep it private, that is your choice. If you wish to share it, your contact information will be posted in a place where new clients can find it and one that has been referred by TALCB. The ATA new search engine will show appraiser's location on a map of Texas. It is up to ATA members to decide if they use their home or business address for that location and ensure the address and contact information is correct.

One of the main reasons behind updating the ATA website was to improve the search features. When the board approved the funding, we had no idea the new privacy law was pending. Our timing couldn't have been better. Special thanks to Hansel Dobbs for creating the new logo, the website and managing the transition and to Jeremy McGarrah for all his help.

Legislative and Current Events Update from TALCB Meeting

Brian Marlow, ATA-R ATA Vice President

2023, the TALCB met to discuss multiple items including new proposed rules, amendments, PAREA, appraisal license holder breakdown

breakdown of complaints received by the TALCB.

The meeting can be viewed in its entirety here: https://www.talcb.texas.gov/apps/meetings/view.php?meeting id=643

A hard copy of meeting notes are available on the TALCB website: https://www.talcb.texas.gov/

Proposed Rules and Amendments

Several newly proposed rules and amendments were discussed that covered fees for record requests, AMC fee recovery regulation, and reimbursement for TALCB employee education. An "Online Public Comment Tool" is available until December 24th on the TALCB website for all feedback regarding the new, proposed or amended rules.

On Novem- Changes to Senate Bill 510

Senate Bill 510 went into effect September 1, 2023. It requires all state licensing agencies to remove personal information of license holders from publicly available spaces such as the Board's website. This may make it more difficult for aspiring appraisers to find supervisory appraisers and mentors. Per the TALCB website, alternative sources for trainees to find a supervisory appraiser would be through the Association of Texas Appraiser (ATA), the Foundation Appraisers Coalition of Texas (FACT), the Appraisal Institute (AI) or the Appraiser Diversity Initiative (ADI).

PAREA Update

The Appraisal Institute (AI) launched its Practical Applications of Real Estate Appraisal (PAREA) program on September 6. As of October, AI reported 16 Texans are enrolled — the most of any state in the country. The Appraisal Institute estimates that it will take two weeks for people to complete the "readiness checklist" and registration process before starting the PAREA program. The Institute is prepared to accommodate up to 225 sign-ups, if not more.

Cost of the program starts at $3,995. Other than paying in full, options such as scholarships, discounts, and payment plans will also be available.

Al launched a PAREA pilot program over the summer in which 15 people from around the country participated. They are expected to finish over the next two months. While PAREA is designed for participants to work at their own pace, six months is the predicted average completion time.

The Institute is also working on its certified residential PAREA module that is still in development.

More and more states around the country are starting to accept PAREA as a legitimate form of gaining appraisal experience. The Appraisal Foundation is tracking 42 "PAREA-ready", states including Texas.

Texas Active Certifications and Licenses

The meeting included comprehensive graphs of currently licensed appraiser numbers for the state of Texas and updated graphs of statistics for complaints received and method of resolution.

Through September 2023, Texas had 5,823 total appraisers (General, Certified & Licensed) and 1,311 trainees. This was a 3.5% increase in General, Certified & Licensed appraisers versus September 2022; however, there was an 11.6% decrease in trainees versus September 2022 cumulative numbers. Discussions regarding the decrease in trainees included

AARO in Salt Lake City

keep membership informed of all that's happening in our profession, ATA has been sending its presidents to industry meetings and conferences as our budget and time allow. This year I went to the AARO (Association of Appraisal Regulatory Officials) conference in Salt Lake City. I chose this conference to escape the bubble of all-appraiser conferences to get a little different perspective. Here's what I learned.

Bias was a big topic. However, most state agencies, including Texas, have found bias claims difficult to enforce. It turns out that it is hard to look into someone's heart or mind and prove intent. None of the six appraisal-bias lawsuits in the news have been adjudicated. One was dropped. One settled out of court and the remaining four are unresolved. Nor have there been any prosecutions by state agencies.

In Arizona, 14 cases have been closed with letters of concern and all were due to language. The appraisers were warned for using words like gentrification or ethnic descriptions ('Hispanic neighborhood') but were not disciplined.

All the agencies appear to agree that subjective language is a problem that appraisers need to work on. It's an issue in part because of bias, but not entirely. Subjective language is most problematic in neighborhood descriptions. A Trustee of the Appraisal Foundation explained that subjective terms (desirable, walking-distance) are problematic because they are an assignment result and therefore must be supported. They suggest just stating what amenities exist and how close they are rather than using those subjective descriptions. How far is walking distance? Doesn't that depend on the walker?

Personally, I have an issue with this. Part of our job as appraisers is to make comparison judgements. We were taught to use terms like inferior and superior. We have also been taught to analyze, not just describe. I recognize their concerns regarding neighborhood descriptions, but in the comparable analysis we can't just state what features or amenities exist, we have to convey to the reader whether or not it's a good thing to have those features. Freddie Mac specifically asks appraiser to 'show actual sales prices/trends' rather than use words like strong or weak. I put graphs of sales prices over time in my report but will the intended user interpret it the same way I do without the same market knowledge and research?

Appraisal volume and the future of appraisers was also a topic. While volume is way down, the GSEs tried to reassure attendees that appraisers are still the first choice for collateral evaluation. Freddie Mac showed the volume of appraisals relative to the number of appraisers and even a breakdown of the number of appraisals per appraiser in each state. Fannie Mae spoke about their Appraisal Quality Monitoring (AQM) program.

While Fannie tried to put things in context by explaining that only 2,982 AQM letters were sent to 2,790 appraisers (192 appraisers received more than 1 letter) out of the 45,928 appraisers who submitted 5,124,871 appraisal reports. The result was 1,083 appraisals being shared with state agencies. They did not say how many of those were tips and how many were referrals. Tips are appraisals sent to TALCB due to defects or repurchases and referrals are formal complaints based on 'egregious' appraisal issues. Regardless, the GSEs were responsible for the most complaints filed against Texas appraisers as of TALCB's October 2023 report (46% versus 41% filed by consumers).

My biggest take away from the conference was that we have it good here in Texas. That's the same feeling I had after my last AARO conference too. In some states the investigators aren't appraisers. Can you imagine being investigated by somebody who isn't an appraiser and doesn't know what we do? I met two of Texas' investigators at the conference. Not only are they appraisers, but they are smart professionals that also happen to be really nice people. While volume for appraisers has slowed across the nation, Texas ranks 3rd in appraisal volume per appraiser. Nobody tried to predict when volume would pick back up, but because Texas has the nation's fastest growing population, we should continue to fare better than most states.

Zoning: How it Can Change an Appraiser's Career

is legally capable of supporting five plus residential units, or any other commercial use, then a Certified General appraiser must decide regarding the potential use and value."

Zoning can determine what an appraiser can and can't appraise. For instance, if a property is zoned commercially or contains a large multi-family building, then a Certified General appraiser would perform the appraisal. If the property is zoned "SFR" and there are four units or less, then a Certified Residential appraiser can provide the report. What I'm about to describe isn't in every state; however, it's spreading and likely headed your way, which is why I'm providing this warning. If certain changes in zoning become law in your state, prepare for a massive decrease in the number of properties a residential appraiser can appraise. Now, before I explain the zoning change, please allow me to provide a little history.

Over the past 80 years there has been a series of federal laws, rules, regulations, and common business practices that have classified residential lending into two distinct categories: residential and multi-family. Laws making this separation include, but are not limited to, the Housing Act of 1949, the 1968 creation of the Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae), laws creating the Housing and Urban Development (HUD) which oversee the Veterans Administration (VA) and Federal Housing Administration (FHA) and the Financial Institutions Reform Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989 (FIRREA). These laws, together with common banking practices, indicate properties that have or can contain five units, or more are considered "multifamily" or commercial properties.

"If a property Definitions quoted in FIRREA:

- Residential real estate transaction means: a real estate-related financial transaction that is secured by a single 1-to-4 family residential property.
- Dwelling: a residential structure that contains one-to-four units, [...]
- Commercial real estate transaction means: a real estate-related financial transaction that is not secured by a single 1-to-4 family residential property.

Fannie Mae has a wide latitude when buying loans from lenders if loans involve 1-to-4 unit properties. When a loan involves five or more units (multifamily), they are restricted in the number and amount of these loans they can purchase by law. These loans also require a substantial increase in the down payment amount used to purchase a property (say goodbye to five percent down).

Appraisals were similarly divided by the various government agencies and lenders. Appraising a property with, or capable of supporting, four units or less uses a simplified appraisal process. These properties are more common; loan amounts are lower, and the potential loss to a lender if a loan goes into default is reduced. The information a lender needs prior to funding a loan created and required the use of these standardized forms prior to their purchase of loans from lenders.

Valuing commercial property, including multi-family housing, is more complex. In this market segment there are different types of buyers, larger loan amounts, and more complex loan qualifying standards. Loans on multi-family properties are unlikely to be sold on the secondary market therefore, they create far more risk for lenders. There is no standardized appraisal form for properties with more than four unitsthey are narratives custom created and often exceeding 100 pages in length. The requirements and level of information for these reports far exceed those used in a typical appraisal form. The depth of information and complexity also necessitates extensive additional training and licensing for appraisers. Lenders and various government agencies have determined that the separation point between simple and complex properties is when a property has, or can support, five units or more. Based upon this separation, federal laws mandating the licensing/ certification of appraisers also followed this same classification. Generally speaking. Certified Residential appraisers are limited to appraising residential properties of any value with four units or less. In comparison, Certified General appraisers are allowed to appraise for a 1-to-4 unit property is reduced to a point where standardized appraisal forms (FNMA Form 1004 or 1025) are used. Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac buildings with five units, or more including commercial, industrial, and agricultural properties. This separation is similar to the classification used all across the United States.

Highest and Best Use

When providing appraisals for market value, the Uniform Standards of Professional Appraisal Practice (USPAP) requires appraisers to perform a highest and best use analysis of the property as if vacant and as improved if there is an existing structure on the property. Determining the legal uses and value of the property as if vacant then determines the contributing use and value of any existing structure on the property. If a property legally, physically, and financially can support up to four units then a Certified Residential appraiser can determine the property's value. However, if a property is legally capable of supporting five plus residential units, or any other commercial use, then a Certified General appraiser must decide regarding the potential use and value.

New Washington State Law and the Issue

The state of Washington just passed a new law that requires cities to rezone all single-family areas based on the following:

- Cities with a population between 25,000 and 75,000 must be rezoned to a minimum of four units per residential lot.
- Cities with a population greater than 75,000 must rezone to allow a minimum of six units per lot.

Here's the problem, once five or more units are "allowed" to be built on a lot. the required highest and best use analysis and conclusion must be made by a Certified General appraiser. Washington's new law will eventually prohibit Residentially Certified appraisers from appraising any home in any city with a population greater than 75,000. Now imagine that you receive an appraisal order for a small home built in 1950 on a 10,000sf lot, and due to the zoning change, the property's highest and best use is to tear it down and build a five or six-unit building. Boy, isn't the AMC going to be happy when you tell them that they will have to find a Certified General appraiser to perform the appraisal? Assuming they can find one who isn't booked out for eight weeks and/or willing to do it for less than $2,000. For firms like mine, it's going to take additional time to figure out where we can or cannot appraise. Our H&BU analysis will take longer and portions of it will need to be considered before we accept an appraisal assignment. For the past several years, we have been dealing with similar zoning in Portland, Spokane, and Seattle. Now our appraisal fees are much higher so we can perform them right.

Clearly, the people who thought up and passed this law didn't understand appraisals or banking laws.

The Warning

While this new law may seem odd that it could only be created by the wacky people on the "left coast," I've found that the idea is spreading and likely to come to your city, county, or state. For instance, Portland, Oregon has a similar zoning. California, through a series of laws passed over several years, has achieved the same thing and I'm hearing that Phoenix may have similar pending legislation. Even the White House is trying to come up with ways to "reduce housing costs" through changes in zoning. In other words, this wacky "left coast" idea is spreading.

The number of appraisals being performed today is half of what it was in 2020. Now, imagine if these numbers were further reduced due to the rezoning of a city or state to a point where residential appraisers are not allowed to provide the appraisal.

Here are the opening words contained in the new law explaining the need for change:

The legislature finds that Washington is facing an unprecedented housing crisis for its current population and a lack of housing choices and is not likely to meet the affordability goals for future populations. In order to meet the goal of 1,000,000 new homes by 2044, and enhance quality of life and environmental protection, innovative housing policies will need to be adopted. Increasing housing options that are more affordable to various income levels is critical to achieving the state's housing goals...There is a continued need for the development of housing at all income levels, including middle housing that will provide a wider variety of housing options and configurations to allow Washingtonians to live near where they work. Homes developed at higher densities are more affordable by design for Washington residents both in their construction and reduced household energy and transportation costs. Notice how it starts off with a logical statement and general need, which many of us would agree with...then the details kick in and it's not pretty. While I agree with the general goal, rezoning all SFR areas to multi-family isn't the first choice for a solution. How about we try changing the cost of obtaining a building permit or shortening the time it takes to obtain the permit (which is approaching four-plus months in our area)?

Solutions

Competent appraisers have a better understanding of real estate, banking, and appraisal laws. Zoning is a local issue and shouldn't be controlled at the state or federal level. If you see something like this being considered in your community or state, please become involved! People who create these laws must learn and understand banking and appraisal laws and their limitations. Ask your local appraisal coalitions to become involved as well. Help educate the people, because doing so might just save your career. I'm trying to keep you safe...and employed out there.

Happy Holidays!

Stephanie Streep, ATA-R ATA Board Member

and I recently experienced a rare moment of repose at our ranch over Thanksgiving weekend. Our days were filled with midst of

season, my family

hikes, golf cart rides, family games, and even my son honed his archery skills. Amid these festivities, we also carved out time to view the latest Top Gun installment—a film I wholeheartedly recommend. Interestingly, the movie mirrored the prevailing narrative in our industry, which grapples with the encroaching influence of Al and computers threatening to replace traditional roles. The movie's similarity to our industry struggles strangely comforted me, making me feel less alone, even if it is just a movie.

Nevertheless, this holiday break reminded me of the tough times we've been through. For many, the mere prospect of a four-day weekend from the office was once deemed a faroff dream. Thanksgiving breaks were often overshadowed by urgent tasks, epitomized by the looming closure of 135,731 loans—complete with the final inspection requests—scheduled for the Friday after Thanksgiving. My father's mantra, "Make hay while the sun is shining," always kept me going, but it seemed to be shining for a while. Many of us have been in the industry long enough to know that it wouldn't always be that way and hopefully, planned accordingly.

Many, including my father, seized the opportunity to retire or embrace semiretirement. His years of tireless dedication gave way to a newfound freedom, manifested in global travels and a partial residence on his 47-foot sailboat in Panama. He and my mom now enjoy $2 beers on the floating bar most evenings. Seeing my mom on Instagram, looking like she's on Spring Break, is a sure sign that they are enjoying their "golden years". Although, he does still take on assignments from time to time when he's back in town and my parents look after my boys for a weekend, giving my husband and me some time to unwind.

As industry veterans transition into retirement, an unforeseen consequence emerges—a possible heightened demand for appraisers. Although it may be slow now, eventually the demand will be back and this time, the supply of appraisers may be even less than before. We don't want them looking for alternatives so we must be prepared. This juncture presents a unique . chance for professionals to enrich their expertise through additional courses, specialization, and preparation for the evolving landscape. Our role as unbiased custodians of the industry must be underscored, emphasizing the irreplaceable value of human-appraised data. We must show how important we are to protect the consumer. We are the UNBIASED party - everyone else makes money when the loan closes and this should be the point we emphasize when discussing our role. No matter what computer program is utilized, human influence remains, and time will show how important it is to have an appraisal completed by a licensed appraiser in order to protect the consumer.

Despite the potential Iull in business this year, dictated by geographical variations and client dynamics, the holiday season beckons. Time is something that cannot be bought and it keeps going whether you are paying attention or not. As for me, my boys are young, and we are going to focus on the magic of Christmas this year. I'm going to enjoy all the peppermint flavored treats, take in all the holiday lights, get some decent sleep, and spend less time in front of a screen. There are several inexpensive holiday activities that can brighten the season:

- Check out local holiday lights.
  - Go to a tree lighting.
- Make ornaments.
- Watch holiday movies.
- Drink hot chocolate.
- Go caroling.
- Make cookies or other holiday treats.
- Make smores.
- Volunteer at a shelter, soup kitchen or nursing home.
- Write a letter to friends, family, or the troops.
- Go hiking or take a night walk looking at lights.
- Have a dance party to Christmas music.

In whatever way you spend your holidays, I hope they are Merry and Bright!
